90.7 KWMU NAMES WOLF SCIENCE REPORTER

90.7 KWMU-FM is pleased to announce Catherine Wolf has been named Science Reporter. Wolf comes to KWMU from KBIA in Columbia, Missouri, where she served as a producer and reporter.

Wolf is a graduate of Columbia College Chicago (2005), where she received her Bachelor of Arts in Journalism, and the University of Missouri (2008) where she earned a Master of Arts in Journalism. Previously, Wolf served as a public relations specialist for Evanston Northwestern Healthcare and a writer/editor for Echo magazine while earning her undergraduate degree.

The science reporter position is part of KWMU's Focus on Science Initiative, funded by grants from the Monsanto Fund.

90.7 KWMU-FM, St. Louis' premier National Public Radio (NPR) station, provides in-depth news, intelligent talk and great entertainment, and is a member-supported service of the University of Missouri-St. Louis.
