90.7 KWMU REPORTERS RECEIVE
EDWARD R. MURROW AWARDS

90.7 KWMU-FM news producer, Adam Allington, and science reporter, Catherine Wolf, are recipients of 2009 Regional Edward R. Murrow Awards from the Radio and Television News Directors Association. The awards recognize excellence in radio production for large market stations in Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri.

Allington received two awards, one in the Feature Reporting category for his story “Old School Wrestling,” the other in the News Series category for his three-part series “Gangs of North St. Louis.” Wolf earned recognition in the News Series category for her four-part series “Living Green in Mid Missouri.” Wolf produced this series while working as a news producer for KBIA-FM in Columbia, Missouri.

90.7 KWMU-FM, St. Louis’ premier National Public Radio (NPR) station, provides in-depth news, intelligent talk and great entertainment, and is a member-supported service of the University of Missouri-St. Louis.
